asserting authority over any living man or woman in any matter in any jurisdiction notice to agent is notice to principal; notice to principal is notice to agent;

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

i, ball, kenneth scott, a living man, hereby place all officers, agents, and corporate actors on formal written notice of the following facts regarding the employment applications, bar applications, and official appointment instruments through which each such officer obtained the authority they now assert over any living man or woman in any matter; this notice applies universally to every officer in every proceeding and is not limited to any single case or jurisdiction;

ARTICLE I – THE FOUNDATIONAL FACT

1. every corporate actor asserting authority in any matter – every judge, every prosecutor, every attorney, every clerk, every investigator, every agent, every officer of any court or agency – obtained their position through an employment application, a bar application, a judicial appointment application, or an equivalent official instrument;

2. on that application, every such actor identified themselves using the state-created legal organization name – the all-caps or mixed-case legal name created by the state upon the registration of their birth – and attached to that legal organization name their biological date of birth;

3. the biological date of birth is not the correct date for the legal organization name; the correct date of the legal organization name is the file registration date – the date the county recorder created the legal organization name in the official records of the state – which is distinct from the biological date of birth of the living man or woman who stands behind that name;

4. title i, section 201(b) of the real id act of 2005 requires the person's date of birth on government identity instruments; the person is the legal organization name – the commercial entity – not the biological being; the person's date of birth is therefore the file registration date – not the biological date of birth of the living man or woman who stands behind it;

5. every officer who placed their biological date of birth on their employment application for the legal organization name placed a materially incorrect date on that application – the wrong date for the entity they were representing themselves as – in violation of the government's own definitional standard under the real id act;

ARTICLE II – THE LEGAL CONSEQUENCES

6. a material misrepresentation on an employment application voids the employment contract; a contract obtained through misrepresentation is voidable by the non-misrepresenting party – restatement second of contracts § 164 – a party who makes a material misrepresentation is not entitled to enforcement of the resulting contract;

7. a position of authority obtained through a voidable employment contract is itself void; authority derived from a void instrument is null; every act performed under authority obtained through a materially misrepresented employment application is therefore performed without lawful authority;

8. for federal officers – every federal employee who completed standard form 86 or optional form 306 and placed their biological date of birth on the line designated for the date of the legal organization name has made a false statement in a federal record; under 18 u.s.c. § 1001 – false statements to a federal agency – knowingly making a false statement in a federal employment record carries up to five years per false statement;

9. for bar attorneys – every attorney who completed a bar application and placed their biological date of birth on that application for the legal organization name used to apply has placed a material misrepresentation on the instrument through which their license to practice law was obtained; a license obtained through misrepresentation is subject to revocation; every act performed under an invalidly obtained bar license is performed without lawful authority;

10. for judicial officers – every judge who completed a judicial appointment application or nomination questionnaire and placed their biological date of birth on that instrument for the legal organization name has placed a material misrepresentation on the instrument through which their judicial authority was obtained; orders issued under such authority are issued without lawful judicial power;

ARTICLE III – THE ESTOPPEL ARGUMENT

11. estoppel is an equitable doctrine that prevents a party from asserting a position inconsistent with a position previously taken when another party has relied on that prior position to their detriment; under the clean hands maxim – he who comes into equity must come with clean hands – a party that has engaged in the same conduct it seeks to penalize in another cannot seek equitable or legal relief on the basis of that conduct;

12. the government cannot simultaneously assert:

position a: the file registration date is the correct date of the legal organization name under the real id act – and therefore the biological date commingle onto the legal organization name in any charging instrument, license, or official record makes that instrument defective; AND position b: its own officers' use of the biological date of birth on their employment applications for their legal organization names is not a material misrepresentation that voids their authority and every act taken under it;

13. the government must choose one position and apply it uniformly to all parties:

if the file registration date is the correct date – then every officer's employment application bearing the biological date is defective and their authority is void; OR if the biological date is acceptable – then the commingling of the biological date onto the legal organization name in any charging instrument or official record is equally acceptable and no defect exists;

14. equal application of the law – the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment – the clean hands maxim – and the doctrine of estoppel all compel the same conclusion: if the date is wrong on the charging instrument it was equally wrong on the employment application; if it was wrong on the employment application the authority derived from that application is no more valid than any obligation derived from that instrument;

ARTICLE IV – SPECIFIC CHALLENGE TO ALL OFFICERS

15. the living man hereby challenges the authority of every officer, agent, and corporate actor asserting authority in any matter involving any living man or woman on the following grounds:

a. each such officer obtained their position through an employment application, bar application, or appointment instrument that placed the biological date of birth as the date of the legal organization name – a material misrepresentation under the real id act standard;

b. the employment contract, bar license, or judicial appointment obtained through that misrepresentation is voidable and the authority derived therefrom is void;

c. every order, ruling, filing, decision, investigation, prosecution, and act performed under that void authority is performed without lawful authority and is void;

d. the doctrine of estoppel prevents the officer from asserting any defective instrument argument against the living man while simultaneously asserting the validity of their own authority obtained through the identical misrepresentation;

e. the clean hands maxim prevents any officer who came to their position through a materially misrepresented application from seeking any equitable or legal remedy against the living man on the basis of a defective instrument containing the identical misrepresentation;

ARTICLE V – DEMANDS UPON ALL OFFICERS

16. the living man hereby demands that every officer asserting authority in any matter involving the living man provide the following in writing within ten (10) days of receipt of this notice:

a. a certified copy of the employment application, bar application, or judicial appointment instrument through which their authority was obtained, showing the date placed on that instrument for the legal organization name;

b. the specific statute or regulation authorizing the use of the biological date of birth as the date of the legal organization name on said application, given that the real id act defines the person's date of birth as the file registration date;

c. a written explanation of how the officer's authority remains valid despite the material misrepresentation of the date of the legal organization name on their employment application;

d. written confirmation of which date – the file registration date or the biological date – the officer maintains is the correct date of the legal organization name, with confirmation that the same standard will be applied uniformly to the living man and to the officer;

17. failure to respond within ten (10) days constitutes:

a. tacit admission of the material misrepresentation on the employment application;

b. tacit admission that the authority derived from that application is void;

c. tacit admission that every act performed under that void authority is performed without lawful authority;

d. tacit admission that estoppel and the clean hands maxim bar the officer from asserting any claim against the living man founded on the identical misrepresentation in the officer's own employment record;

ARTICLE VI – UNIVERSAL APPLICATION

18. this notice is not limited to any single case, proceeding, or jurisdiction; it applies universally to every officer, agent, attorney, judge, clerk, investigator, and corporate actor who has obtained their position through an employment application, bar application, or appointment instrument bearing the biological date of birth as the date of the legal organization name;

19. this notice may be used by any living man or woman in any matter in any jurisdiction as a foundational challenge to the authority of any officer who has obtained their position through a materially misrepresented employment instrument; the facts stated herein are facts of universal application – they apply to every legal organization name created by every state in every jurisdiction operating under the gregorian calendarium and the real id act standard;

20. this notice is placed on the public record as a standing notice to all officers in all matters; receipt of this notice by any officer in any matter constitutes notice to all officers in all matters; notice to agent is notice to principal; notice to principal is notice to agent;

ARTICLE VII – RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

21. the living man reserves all rights at all times without prejudice and without waiver of any right or remedy available at law or in equity; the production of this notice does not constitute consent to the jurisdiction of any court or agency over the living man in his private capacity; the living man invokes ucc § 1-308 – performance or acceptance under reservation of rights – as to all acts performed under compulsion in any matter; all rights are reserved; none are waived; none are abandoned;

22. this notice is made in peace, truth, and honor, without intent to mislead, defraud, or dishonor any living being, officer, or institution;
